Synopsis of Show

Story based on (Tales of the South Pacific) by James A Michner.

Emile de Becque, a middle aged French planter farming a South Pacific island during World War 2. is entertaining a young, vibrant American nurse, Nellie Forbush, at his country home. There is love, but Nellie is reluctant over the age difference. The island is also the base for Seabees and Bloody Mary, a friend to the American serviceman who provides anything for a price. Her competition is Luther Billis, a fast-buck operator. To compete, however, he must get to Bali Ha'i, an off limits island of treasure and girls. His only hope is Lt. Joseph Cable, a newly arrived officer who can obtain a launch for transport to the island. Cable's mission is a dangerous one. He seeks to set up a spy outpost on a Japanese-held island and has come to persuade Emile to go with him. The planter once lived on the island and knows it well. When Emile turns him down, Cable remembers Mary's haunting description of Bali Ha'i. On the island Mary takes him to Liat, a lovely young Polynesian girl who turns out to be Mary's daughter. It a marvelous night, but Cable can stay no longer. Bank on the main island, Nellie is attending a party at Emile's. She is ready to give up her concern over their ages when she discovers Emile has been married to a Polynesian woman. Her immediate feeling is disappointment. Later when Emile learns she has asked for a transfer, he is bitter. He comes across Mary asking Cable to marry Liat. But Cable's prejudice, too prevents him from joining his love. Emile has lost his reason for not going with Cable and agrees to make the mission. Through their efforts the Japanese are forced to evacuate the area, but the success costs Cable his life. Nellie has realized that nothing matter but her love for Emile. Not knowing if he will ever return, she returns his house to care for his two children. The Allies move in to mop up the Japanese territory and Emile is rescued and returned to Nellie and his family.
